“She Has To Be Controlled”

Exploring the Action Heroine in Contemporary Science Fiction Cinema

Doctor of Philosophy in English

Caroline A. Green
2010
“She Has to be Controlled”:
Exploring the Action Heroine in Contemporary Science Fiction Cinema

Submitted by Caroline Ann Green to the University of Exeter as a thesis for the degree of
Doctor of Philosophy in English
in April 2010.

This thesis is available for Library use on the understanding that it is copyright material and that no quotation from the thesis may be published without proper acknowledgement.

I certify that all material in this thesis which is not my own work has been identified and that no material has previously been submitted and approved for the award of a degree by this or any other University

Signature .................................................
Abstract

In this dissertation I explore a number of contemporary science fiction franchises in order to ascertain how the figure of the action heroine has evolved throughout her recent history. There has been a tendency in film criticism to view these strong women as ‘figuratively male’ and therefore not ‘really’ women, which, I argue, is largely due to a reliance on the psychoanalytic paradigms that have dominated feminist film theory since its beginnings. Building on Elisabeth Hills’s work on the character of Ellen Ripley of the Alien series, I explore how notions of ‘becoming’ and the ‘Body without Organs’ proposed by Gilles Deleuze and Félix Guattari can be activated to provide a more positive set of readings of active women on screen. These readings are not limited by discussions of sex or gender, but discuss the body in terms of its increased capacities as it interacts with the world around it. I do not argue for a Deleuzian analysis of cinema as such, because this project is concerned with aspects of representation which did not form part of Deleuze’s philosophy of cinema. Rather I use Deleuze and Guattari’s work to explore alternative ways of reading the active women these franchises present and the benefits they afford. Through these explorations I demonstrate, however, that applying the Deleuzoguattarian ‘method’ is a potentially risky undertaking for feminist theory. Deconstructing notions of ‘being’ and ‘identity’ through the project of becoming may have benefits in terms of addressing ‘woman’ beyond binaristic thought, but it may also have negative consequences. What may be liberating for feminist film theory may be also be destructive. This is because through becoming we destabilise a position from which to address potentially ideologically unsound treatments of women on screen.
Acknowledgements

Throughout my time writing this thesis, I thought acknowledgements to be somewhat of an indulgence. However, through reflection having now reached this blessèd point of completion, I realise that there are many people who have, in their various ways, helped me on this journey whom I’d really rather like to say a big thank you to.

My first thanks go to Professor Steve Neale for very kindly agreeing to supervise this project to completion. It has been a joy to work such a pleasant, understanding and patient person and I fear I really couldn’t have done it without his support. I also thank the University of Exeter for the bursary that facilitated this study. I would also like to thank my examiners, Dr Helen Hanson and Professor Catherine Constable for their invaluable feedback.

The support and encouragement I have received from my fellow students at the University of Exeter and friends has been invaluable. In particular, for proofreading the final drafts of this work, I must thank Dr Alice Barnaby, Ruth Harrison, Dr Amy McGill, Dr Shani Rousso, and Dr Lewis Ward. Especially large amounts of thanks are bestowed upon Dr Stephanie Piotrowski, not only for reading my drafts but also for always having faith in me and being endlessly enthusiastic about my project. I also thank Thomas Malley for the encouragement and for providing me with ample opportunities to gain ‘critical distance.’

I must also thank those that helped me prepare for the viva. Firstly, thank you to Tess Nixon and Paul Spiller for their boundless hospitality and providing a safe haven of loveliness in which to prepare. Many, many thanks also to Richard Feltham for the mock viva and, as always, for the laughter.

My greatest gratitude is, however, reserved for Pauline Green and Mel Taylor, whom I must thank not only for supporting me throughout this project but also for the love that kept me going.
Table of Contents

List of Figures
Introduction
Literature Review
Chapter One
Chapter Two
Chapter Three
Chapter Four
Conclusions
Figures
Bibliography
Filmography

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Section</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>List of Figures</td>
<td>6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Introduction</td>
<td>8</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Literature Review</td>
<td>28</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Chapter One</td>
<td>53</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Chapter Two</td>
<td>117</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Chapter Three</td>
<td>178</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Chapter Four</td>
<td>238</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Conclusions</td>
<td>263</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Figures</td>
<td>272</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bibliography</td>
<td>293</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Filmography</td>
<td>315</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>