The embodied imagination:

affect, bodies, experience

Submitted by Leila Alexandra Dawney to the University of Exeter

as a thesis for the degree of

Doctor of Philosophy in Geography

January 2011

This thesis is available for Library use on the understanding that it is copyright material and that no quotation from the thesis may be published without proper acknowledgement.

I certify that all material in this thesis which is not my own work has been identified and that no material has previously been submitted and approved for the award of a degree by this or any other University.

Signature: .................................................................
The embodied imagination:

affect, bodies, experience

Abstract

This thesis offers a critical interrogation of the relationship between and co-production of bodies, texts and spaces. It introduces and develops the concept of the embodied imagination through the philosophy of Spinoza and recent Spinozist thinkers as a way of informing a materialist account of the production of experience. The embodied imagination, as material and affective, can supplement a Foucauldian account of subjectivation through its ability to offer an account of experience ‘after the subject’ – of experience as the surface effects of the movement of affect through and across bodies, texts and spaces that are productive of transsubjective social imaginaries. This can contribute to a fuller account of subject production and to a formulation of embodied politics based on a political analytic of feeling.

These conceptual arguments are mobilised through exemplars from ethnographic fieldwork based on the geographical concerns of landscape, embodied practice and place imaginaries. In particular, I point to specific outdoor practices, techniques and regimes that, in their imbrication in certain imaginaries, contribute to a sense of place and belonging. Through a ‘thoroughly materialist’ approach to these concerns, bodies’ involvement in material relations with other bodies and with the world are shown to be central to experience-production. I argue too that this approach can expose the relations of power that produce the very materialities of bodies, and as such can shed light on the politics of the nonrepresentational and its centrality to the production of embodied subjectivities. In doing so, a postfoundational sociology of embodied experience is formulated that operates according to a politics of radical contingency. This postfoundational perspective foregrounds an ontology of the encounter over presence: an ontogenetic account of the emergence of bodies, texts and spaces from their material imbrication in a world charged with affective resonance.
Contents

Abstract ..................................................................................................................................... 2

Chapter 1: Introduction ............................................................................................................ 6
  Bodies, texts and spaces. ....................................................................................................... 6
  The embodied imagination and the politics of affect .......................................................... 9
  The structuring of experience and the historicity of the body .......................................... 10
  The geographies of radical contingency and the impossibility of presence or connection 12

Chapter summaries ............................................................................................................. 12

Chapter 2: Towards a postfoundational sociology of embodied experience ......................... 19
  Part 1: Practice .................................................................................................................. 20
  Part 2: Embodiment and experience ................................................................................. 38
  Conclusion .......................................................................................................................... 51

Chapter 3: Spinoza and the embodied imagination ............................................................... 55
  Introduction ......................................................................................................................... 55
  Spinoza today ...................................................................................................................... 57
  Substance ............................................................................................................................ 59
  Motion and rest ................................................................................................................... 60
  Conatus ............................................................................................................................... 61
  Mind and Body in Spinoza ................................................................................................. 62
  Affect .................................................................................................................................. 64
  Forms of knowledge ............................................................................................................ 65
  Imaginaries .......................................................................................................................... 66
  The embodied imagination ................................................................................................. 72
  The politics of affect .......................................................................................................... 75
  Reclaiming the imagination .............................................................................................. 76
  The embodied imagination in practice ............................................................................... 78

Chapter 4: New materialisms .............................................................................................. 81
  Introduction ......................................................................................................................... 81
  Affect after the subject ....................................................................................................... 83
  The materiality of thought ................................................................................................. 86
  New materialities and spatialities ....................................................................................... 95
  A return to the human ....................................................................................................... 101
  Conclusion: the materiality of the text ............................................................................. 103

Chapter 5: Interlude .............................................................................................................. 107
The story so far ................................................................................................................. 107
Exemplars and theory ...................................................................................................... 111
The problem of writing .................................................................................................... 113
The theoretical and the empirical.................................................................................. 115
Chapter 6: Landscape, place and the embodied imagination .............................................. 122
  Introduction ...................................................................................................................... 122
  Cultural geographies of landscape ................................................................................ 123
  Approach ........................................................................................................................... 126
  Landscape and Englishness ............................................................................................ 127
  Turquoise .......................................................................................................................... 129
  Imagining Cornwall ......................................................................................................... 132
  Constellations ................................................................................................................... 135
  Undercliff .......................................................................................................................... 137
  Swimming .......................................................................................................................... 141
  Conclusion ......................................................................................................................... 144
Chapter 7: Affective bodies and the interruption ................................................................. 147
  Introduction ...................................................................................................................... 147
  Malevolent inscriptions ................................................................................................. 154
  A campsite incident ........................................................................................................... 156
  A camper van incident ...................................................................................................... 158
  Conclusion ......................................................................................................................... 160
Chapter 8: Techniques of the self and the embodied imagination ........................................ 163
  Introduction ...................................................................................................................... 163
  Techniques of the self ..................................................................................................... 164
  Future selves ..................................................................................................................... 169
  Secular pilgrimages ........................................................................................................... 172
  Hupomnemata .................................................................................................................. 175
  Storing experience outside of the body ............................................................................ 178
  Spectral selves ................................................................................................................... 180
  The temporalisation of the self ......................................................................................... 182
  Conclusion ......................................................................................................................... 184
Chapter 9: Landscape, foundation, testimony - geographies of disconnection ....................... 186
  Introduction ...................................................................................................................... 186
  A conversation in a pub: a connective imaginary ............................................................ 187