

What influences student teachers' ability to promote dialogic talk in the primary classroom?'

Submitted by Anne Fisher to the University of Exeter

As a thesis for the degree of

Doctor of Philosophy by Research in January 2011

This thesis is available for library use on the understanding that it is copyright material and that no quotation from the thesis may be published without proper acknowledgement.

I certify that all material in this thesis which is not my own work has been identified and that no material has previously been submitted and approved for the award of a degree by this or any other university.

Signature:

Acknowledgements

I would like to offer grateful thanks to my supervisor, Professor Debra Myhill, for her generous, and often intuitive, support during the process of writing this thesis. In understanding when to comment, and when to leave space for me to reflect, she has provided an exemplary role model which I aim to emulate in my own supervisory capacity.

Thanks are also due to Professor Kleine-Staarman for her helpful suggestions and comments about the reader's experience.

To the three cohorts of postgraduate students, and particularly the nine case-study student teachers, I would like to extend my heartfelt thanks. The opportunity to engage in depth with the hopes, thoughts, values and beliefs of these students, rather than simply comment on their attempts to attain the QTS standards, was a privilege. Without their openness, and trust, it would not have been possible to gain insight into the 'hidden' factors which influence practice.

Finally, thanks are due to my two sons, both teachers, who were always sure that their mother was capable of becoming a researcher.

Abstract

This thesis examines what it is that enables postgraduate student teachers to promote the recently introduced curriculum innovation, dialogic talk, in primary classrooms. Drawing on literature relating to the way talk has been enacted in English classrooms for the last thirty five years, it suggests that patterns of verbal interaction have continued to prove resistant to change, despite policy imperatives and university courses.

Adopting a collaborative action research approach, data were collected in three cycles over three years to investigate the perceptions of three successive cohorts of postgraduate students of the role of talk in learning, and the place of the teacher in developing it. Using a sociocultural lens, students' conceptual and pedagogic understanding of dialogic talk, and their ability to promote it, is examined in depth through nine case studies, as are the factors which the participants themselves identify as enabling or inhibiting engagement with innovation.

It is suggested that the lack of a commonly agreed definition, and of readily available theoretical guidance, has reduced dialogic talk to just another label. As such, it can play no significant part in developing practice beyond rapid question-and-answer routines of 'interactive teaching' and the potentially reductive IRF (Initiation, Response, Feedback) script recorded by researchers (Mroz et al, 2000; Myhill, 2006) before, and after the inception of the National Literacy Strategy (1998a).

Turning to the role of the university, it questions the place of the 'demonstration lesson' and whole cohort lectures, urging that significant changes need to be made to the role of the teaching practice tutor, and the nature of 'partnership' between schools and university departments. Finally, it speculates that without a significant change in the way university departments examine, and address, the values, attitudes and memories of talk that student teachers bring with them from their own primary classrooms, there will continue to be replication of practice.

Table of contents

Acknowledgements	i
Abstract	ii
Table of contents.....	iii
List of figures	x
Chapter 1 - Introduction	1
1.1 Speaking from the heart	1
1.2 The centrality of dialogue and the case for change.....	3
1.3 Assuming the mantle of expert	4
Chapter 2 - A Conceptual Framework	7
2.1 Systematic literature review.....	8
2.1.1 Clarification of terms.....	8
2.1.2 Search strategies	12
2.2 Introduction to students' experiences	13
2.2 Dialogue in the Classroom: Revisiting Barnes	14
2.3 Patterns of discourse in the Literacy Hour.....	16
2.3.1 Talk routines as a form of democracy	19
2.4 The relationship between dialogue and pedagogy	20
2.4.1 New Literacies	22
2.5 Exploring the social constructivist perspective	24
2.6 Dialogic talk.....	29
2.6.1 Dialogic Instruction	30
2.6.2 Dialogic enquiry	31
2.6.3 Dialogic teaching	32
2.6.4 Exploratory talk.....	34
2.6.5 The dialogic ideal and dialogic education	34
2.6.6 Dialogical pedagogy: developing affective conditions for learning.....	36

2.6.7 Bakhtin in the classroom: dialogic talk and conceptual learning.....	38
2.7 Developing a professional identity.....	40
2.7.1 The role of student teachers' beliefs in broadening their teaching repertoire .	43
2.7.2 The role of the mentor in developing practice	46
2.7.3 The place of the university in developing thinking professionals	49
2.8 Epistemological development as a factor in valuing dialogue	51
2.9 The complexities of teaching literacy.....	53
2.10 Difficulties relating to the promotion of pedagogic dialogue	55
2.11 Conclusion	57
Chapter 3 – Methodology.....	62
3.1 Concepts explored by the research question	62
3.1.1 An Interpretive approach to enquiry	63
3.1.2 Interpretive Constructivism: an epistemological stance	65
3.1.3 .Reflexivity	66
3.1.4. Collaborative research	67
3.2 Research Design	69
3.2.1 Working with multiple data sets.....	74
3.2.2 Case studies.....	74
3.2.3 Ethical and Political Considerations	76
3.3 Research Instruments.....	79
3.3.1 questionnaires	79
3.3.2 The open response questionnaire.....	81
3.3.3 End questionnaire	82
3.3.4 Reflective writing	83
3.3.5 Semi-structured interviews	84
3.3.6 Video Stimulated Reflective Dialogue (VSRD).....	88
3.3.7 VSRD Cycle 1.....	92
3.3.8 Introduction to VSRD Cycle 2 and 3	93
3.3.9 Research instruments: live lesson observations	94
3.3.10 Co-construction of interviews	95

3.3.11 Alterations to the English course.....	96
3.4. Validity	97
3.4.1 Reliability	98
3.4.2 Generalisability	100
3.4.3 Limitations of the study.....	101
Chapter 4: Dialogic approaches in the classroom: Cycle 1 data analysis	104
4.1 Research objectives	104
4.2. Cycle 1: Case Study 1: Tom.....	107
4.2.1 VSRD.....	108
4.2.2 Tom's conceptual understanding of dialogic talk	108
4.2.3 Tom's understanding of the pedagogical purpose of dialogic talk	109
4.2.4 Tom's critique of his promotion of dialogic talk	110
4.2.5 Tom's concerns about promoting dialogic talk	111
4.2.6 What Tom learned from the process of VSRD	112
4.3 Learning lessons from Cycle 1:	113
4.3.1 Technical difficulties	113
4.3.2 Emerging themes	114
Chapter 5: Dialogic talk in 3 classrooms: data analysis Cycle 2.....	117
5.1 Whole cohort open response questionnaire	117
5.2 The convenience sample.....	118
5.2.1 Pedagogical beliefs about talk.....	120
5.2.2 Beliefs about the role of the teacher	121
5.2.3 Attitude towards noise in lessons	122
5.2.4 Imparting & developing knowledge	122
5.2.5 Concerns about using talk.....	123
5.3 Critical reflection on the questionnaire data	123
5.4 Partner student researchers	124
5.5 Case study 2: Simon.....	125
5.5.1 Introduction to the use of video	127

5.5.2 e-mail contact	128
5.5.3 VSRD in the final placement	129
5.5.4 Simon's understanding of dialogic talk and its pedagogical purpose.....	129
5.5.5 Simon's critique of his promotion of dialogic talk and concerns about it.....	130
5.5.6 What Simon learned from the process of VSRD	132
5.5.7 Analysis of Simon's commentary	133
5.6 Case study 3: Susie	134
5.6.1 Intro to VSRD	135
5.6.2 e-mail contact	135
5.6.3 VSRD in the final placement: Susie's understanding of dialogic talk and its pedagogical purpose	136
5.6.4 Susie's critique of her use of dialogic talk and concerns about promoting it	137
5.6.5 What Susie learned from the process of VSRD	138
5.6.6 Analysis of Susie's commentary.....	139
5.7 Case study 4: Bill	140
5.7.1 Intro to VSRD	141
5.7.2 e-mail contact	143
5.7.3 VSRD in the final placement: Bill's understanding of dialogic talk and its pedagogical purpose	143
5.7.4 Bill's critique of his use of dialogic talk and concerns about promoting it	144
5.7.5 What Bill learned from the process of VSRD	146
5.7.6 Analysis of Bill's commentary.....	146
5.8 Group Exit Questionnaire	147
5.8.1 Talk histories	149
5.8.2 Pedagogical beliefs	149
5.8.3 The role of the teacher	149
5.8.4 Conceptualising Dialogic talk	150
5.8.5 Emerging themes	153
5.8.6 Reflection on Cycle 2	154
Chapter 6: Dialogic approaches in five classrooms: Cycle 3 data analysis.....	157
6.1 Talk Histories in the Literacy Biography	157

6.1.1 Opportunities for debate and collaborative discussion with peers	157
6.1.2 Ownership of discussion	158
6.1.3 Questioning	159
6.1.4 Opportunities to question and challenge peers and the teacher.....	160
6.1.5 Putting up one' s hand.....	161
6.1.6 Analysis of the reflective writing	162
6.2 Selection of the case study partners	162
6.3. Case study 5: Francesca	164
6.3.1 First encounters with VSRD	165
6.3.2 Contextual information drawn from field-notes.....	165
6.3.3 e-mail reflection	166
6.3.4 VSRD Francesca's understanding of dialogic talk and its pedagogical purpose	167
6.3.5 Francesca's critique of her promotion of dialogic talk and concerns about it	168
6.3.6 Analysis of Francesca 's commentary.....	169
6.4. Case study 6: Dave	170
6.4.1 First encounters with VSRD	171
6.4.2 Contextual information drawn from field-notes.....	171
6.4.3 e-mail reflection	172
6.4.4 VSRD in the final placement: Dave's understanding of dialogic talk and its pedagogical purpose	173
6.4.5 Dave's critique of his promotion of dialogic talk and concerns about it	173
6.4.6 Analysis of Dave's commentary	174
6.5 Case-study 7: Serena	175
6.5.1 First encounters with VSRD	176
6.5.2 Contextual information drawn from field-notes.....	176
6.5.3 e-mail reflection	177
6.5.4 VSRD in the final placement: Serena's understanding of dialogic talk and its pedagogical purpose	178
6.5.5 Serena's critique of her promotion of dialogic talk and concerns about it.....	178
6.5.6 Analysis of Serena's commentary.....	180

6.6 Case study 8: Demelza.....	181
6.6.1 First encounters with VSRD	182
6.6.2 Contextual information drawn from field-notes.....	182
6.6.3 e-mail reflection	183
6.6.4 VSRD in the final placement: Demelza's understanding of dialogic talk and its pedagogical purpose	184
6.6.5 Demelza's critique of her promotion of dialogic talk and concerns about it ..	184
6.6.6 Analysis of Demelza's commentary	185
6.7 Case study 9: Elizabeth.....	187
6.7.1 First encounters with VSRD	187
6.7.2 Contextual information drawn from field-notes.....	188
6.7.3 e-mail reflection	189
6.7.4 VSRD in the final placement: Elizabeth's understanding of dialogic talk and its pedagogical purpose	190
6.7.5 Elizabeth's critique of her promotion of dialogic talk and concerns about it ..	190
6.7.6 Analysis of Elizabeth's commentary.....	191
6.8 Reflection on Cycle 3.....	192
Chapter 7: Discussion.....	194
7.1 Introduction: Drawing the threads together	194
7.2 Scratching the surface and digging deeper: deep and surface understanding of dialogic talk	196
7.3 Constructing a teaching identity	199
7.3.1 Examining prior experience.....	200
7.3.2 Classroom realities.....	203
7.4 University versus school?	206
7.4.1 Creating a teaching identity: the dialogic practitioner.....	209
7.5 Talking to understanding	210
7.5.1 Defining dialogic talk: a sociocultural approach to whole class discourse	211
7.5.2 Achieving common understanding, or building new understandings?	214
7.5.3 "Backing up Vygotsky".....	217

7.6 Talk as a democratic principle	217
7.6.1 Pace	219
7.7 Probing: using the answer as the fulcrum of the learning exchange.....	220
7.7.1 IRF a limiting ritual?.....	222
7.7.2 The place of subject knowledge in developing pupil talk	224
7.8 The way it always has been?	229
7.9 Considering the factors which impact on the promotion of dialogic talk.....	232
Chapter 8: Recommendations	235
8.1 Introduction	235
8.2 Further research	236
8.2.2 Considering epistemology	237
8.2.3 Developing the research culture through partnership	238
8.2.4 Examining 'utterances'	239
8.2.5 Sustaining innovation	240
8.3 Implications for practice	240
8.3.1 Practice in primary classrooms	241
8.3.2 Practice in university	242
8.4 Recommendations for Future policy	243
8.4.1 Talking the talk at university	243
8.4.2 Walking the walk in school	244
Chapter 9: Endnote	247
Appendix 1 Group questionnaire Cycle 1	251
Appendix 2 Entry Questionnaire Cycle 2	252
Appendix 3 Exit Questionnaire Cycle 2.....	254
Appendix 4: Talk Histories: Reflective Writing Cycle 3	255
Appendix 5: Characteristics of Concern.....	256
Appendix 6 Reflective Framework Dialogue	259
Bibliography	262

List of figures

Fig 1: Search terms.....	11
Fig 2:Literature Search.....	12
Fig 3: Final research design.....	73
Fig 4: Changes to the questionnaire design	79
Fig 5: Interview schedule	84
Fig 6: VSRD schedule.....	88
Fig. 7: Interview questions	92
Fig. 8: introduction to data analysis using video	93
Fig. 9: Lesson observation schedule	94
Fig. 10: Alterations to the English course	96
Fig. 11: Overview of Group C.....	118
Fig. 12: Categories and themes from the data.....	119
Fig. 13: Simon's reflective e-mail	128
Fig. 14: Susie's reflective e-mail	136
Fig. 15:Bill's reflective e-mail.....	143
Fig. 16: Categories and themes from the data.....	148
Fig. 17: definitions of dialogic talk	151
Fig. 18: Using dialogic talk	152
Fig. 19: deep and surface features of dialogic talk	197
Fig. 20: Pedagogical purpose of DT	198
Fig.21: Factors influencing student teachers' promotion of dialogic talk	234