A comparative perspective on educational policies for children of immigrants in Taiwan

Submitted by Hsin-Jui Ho, to the University of Exeter as a thesis for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy in Education, May 2012.

This thesis is available for Library use on the understanding that it is copyright material and that no quotation from the thesis may be published without proper acknowledgement.

I certify that all material in this thesis which is not my own work has been identified and that no material has previously been submitted and approved for the award of a degree by this or any other University.

Signature: …………………………………………………………………….
Acknowledgements

This study would not have been possible without the support of many people. Firstly, I greatly appreciate the support of my supervisors. I am deeply grateful to Professor William Richardson for his wisdom, understanding and encouragement over the years of my study. I would also like to show my greatest appreciation to Dr Martin Levinson for his generous guidance and supervision. I wish to express my thanks to Professor Elizabeth Wood for her kind support and advice on this study.

I would like to thank Dr David Crook and Ms Sue Chedzoy for their expertise suggestions, which increases the academic rigour of the thesis.

A very big thank you to all the people who participated in, gave help to and supported this study. Also, I would like to thank all who have assisted me in my educational journey: my friends, my colleagues and National Taipei University of Education from which I graduated and for which I work.

Finally, I would like to thank my family for all they have done for me. My mum and my husband, Jerry, provided their full support. My two young children, Matt and Julia, have always stood by me and help relieve the enormous pressure throughout the study work. Your unfailing love and company was the greatest prop to sustain me in completion of this study.
Abstract

The education of immigrant children is a persistent concern in many western countries. Taiwan has begun to face this challenge in the last decade. The immigrants in this context are mostly females from Southeast Asia and mainland China, on the basis of marriage to a Taiwanese resident. Since Taiwanese society holds a prejudice against them, the children born to foreign mothers are believed to have a negative impact on the quality of the Taiwanese population and to create particular educational problems.

The study employs an interpretive approach combining components of international comparison and policy research. Within this qualitative methodology, mixed methods were used to collect data and gain multiple understandings of the phenomenon in Taiwan. These methods of document analysis, semi-structured interviews and participant observation of foreign mothers’ communities, along with a documentary review of the UK experience of educational policy for immigrant children from the 1960s onwards, provide a comparative perspective that has considerable reference value for Taiwan.

It was found that the children of immigrant mothers in Taiwan do not appear to underachieve or fall behind, in contrast to the prejudice held by Taiwanese society. The study also explores the characteristics of disadvantage of children born to immigrant mothers. Through the comparative historical review of the UK and Taiwan, the study also found that when people are faced with different cultures, their attitudes appear to move through in a similar process of adjustment which interacts with and responds to policy formulation. In addition, some recommendations for educational policy for children of immigrant mothers in Taiwan are discussed. The study proposes that learning plural mother tongues is a means to improve these children’s self-identity, allowing them to develop bilingual advantages and contribute to the country’s competitiveness.
Table of Contents

List of Tables.................................................................................................................. 6
List of Figures ................................................................................................................... 7
1. Introduction .................................................................................................................. 8
   1.1 The research problem ......................................................................................... 9
   1.2 The Knowledge Gap ....................................................................................... 10
   1.3 Research questions ......................................................................................... 13
   1.4 Structure .......................................................................................................... 13
   1.5 Terminology .................................................................................................... 15
2. Methodology: policy research in comparative perspective ........................................ 17
   2.1 Goals of the study ......................................................................................... 17
   2.2 Policy Research ........................................................................................... 18
      2.2.1 Methodology for Policy Research ....................................................... 19
      2.2.2 Problem definition .............................................................................. 27
      2.2.3 Agenda setting ................................................................................... 31
      2.2.4 Policy formulation and suggestion ..................................................... 35
   2.3 International Comparison ........................................................................... 36
      Context matters .............................................................................................. 37
      Focus for Research ....................................................................................... 38
      Diminishing Bias ......................................................................................... 39
      Opportunities in comparative research ...................................................... 40
   2.4 Research design ......................................................................................... 41
      2.4.1 Data Collection Procedure and Sampling ......................................... 41
      2.4.2 Data analysis ....................................................................................... 62
   2.5 Ethical considerations ............................................................................... 66
3. The Policy Problem .................................................................................................. 71
   3.1 Education policy for minorities ........................................................................ 71
   3.2 Why compare the UK with Taiwan? ............................................................. 71
   3.3 Taiwan .......................................................................................................... 73
      3.3.1 Phenomenon of foreign spouses in Taiwan ...................................... 73
      3.3.2 Children of Immigrant Mothers in Taiwan ................................... 87
   3.4 The UK .......................................................................................................... 94
      3.4.1 A History of Ethnic Minority Education Policy of the UK, 1960-1990 .............................................................................................................. 95
      3.4.2 Analysis of this History .................................................................. 132
4. Results and Analysis .............................................................................................. 149
   4.1 Problem Definition ....................................................................................... 149
6.5 Limitations and directions for future research ..............................................295

Bibliography ..............................................................................................................297

Appendix ....................................................................................................................318

Appendix A-Invitation of first stage Interview (English) ..................318
Appendix A-Invitation of first stage Interview(Chinese) .................319
Appendix A-Invitation of first stage Interview (Vietnamese) .......320
Appendix A-Invitation of first stage Interview(Indonesian) .........321
Appendix B- Questions of First Stage Interview ............................322
Appendix C- Informed consent of first Stage Interview (English) ....326
Appendix C- Informed consent of first Stage Interview (Chinese) ...327
Appendix C- Informed consent of first Stage Interview (Indonesian) ..................................................328
Appendix C- Informed consent of first Stage Interview (Vietnamese) ....................................................................................................................329
Appendix D- Questions of Second Stage Interview .......................330
Appendix E- Questions of final Stage Interview .............................333
Appendix F- Informed consent of second and final Stage Interview (Chinese) ..................................................336
Appendix F- Informed consent of second and final Stage Interview (English) ..................................................337
Appendix G- Certificate of ethical research approval ....................338
Appendix H- Royal County of Berkshire -Education for Racial Equality: policy paper 1 ..................................................341
Appendix I- Extract from the Swann Report .................................343
Appendix J- Extract from the Studies regard to Children of foreign mothers ..................................................................................349
List of Tables

Table 2.4.1 Basic data of first stage interviews- I ...............................................................53
Table 2.4.2 Basic data of first stage interviews- II .............................................................54
Table 2.4.3 Basic data of second stage interviews .............................................................57
Table 2.4.4 Basic data of final stage interview ..................................................................59
Table 2.4.5 Basic data of conference participate ...............................................................62
Table 3.3.1 The Number of Foreign Spouses .................................................................74
Table 3.3.2 The Number of Newly Married Couples ......................................................74
Table 3.3.3 The number of births by mother’s nationality of origin in Taiwan ............75
Table 3.3.4 List of countries by GDP per capita (2008) ................................................78
Table 3.3.5 The Number of Foreign Spouses with Residence Permit .......................79
Table 3.3.6 The Number of Foreign Spouses with Residence Permit (excluding China) ........................................................................................................84
Table 3.3.7 Statistics of Foreign Spouses’ Children in Elementary School ...............88
Table 3.3.8 Numbers of Foreign Spouses’ Boys & Girls in Compulsory Education (Categorized by Nationalities) ..............................................................................89
Table 3.3.9 Numbers of Foreign Spouses’ Boys & Girls in Compulsory Education (Categorized by Local Areas and Genders) ......................................................90
Table 3.4.1 Pupils achieving 5 or more A*-C at GCSE/GNVQ: by sex and ethnic group, 2004, England .................................................................124
Table 3.4.2 Issues and controversies in the Swann Report: a model .........................136
List of Figures

Figure 2.2.1 Research Process Affecting Social Problems ............................................... 18
Figure 2.4.1 Interview Sampling Procedure ................................................................. 49
Figure 3.2.1 Developmental model of intercultural sensitivity .......................... 73.133.209
Figure 3.4.1 Mullard’s model ..................................................................................... 135
Figure 4.1.1 PLASC 2002 characteristics: Proportion achieving 5+ A*-C GCSEs for those entered for GCSEs in Maintained Schools in 2002 .......................... 160
Figure 4.1.2 Risk level with the number of disadvantage factors (Daniels, 2008).... 172
Figure 4.2.1 The Agenda-Setting Process Rogers, Dearing, and Chang’s (1991) .. 190
Figure 5.2.1 Taipei County Happy New Inhabitants Quarterly ................................. 242
Figure 5.2.2 Approaches to multicultural curriculum reform (Banks, 1993) ....... 248