Remembering the Socialist Past:
Narratives of East German and Soviet Childhood in German and Russian Fiction and Autobiography since 1990/1

Submitted by Rebecca Louise Knight to the University of Exeter as a thesis for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy in Russian in September 2012

This thesis is available for Library use on the understanding that it is copyright material and that no quotation from the thesis may be published without proper acknowledgement.

I certify that all material in this thesis which is not my own work has been identified and that no material has previously been submitted and approved for the award of a degree by this or any other University.

Signature ........................................................................................................................................
Abstract

This study compares German memory of life in the German Democratic Republic with Russian memory of life in the Soviet Union, as represented and created within fictional and autobiographical narratives of childhood, published since the collapse of each regime. The chosen texts are, to varying degrees, fictionalized and/or autobiographical. A comparison between German and Russian narratives is particularly interesting because the socialist past is remembered very differently in each country’s public discourse and culture. An examination of narratives about childhood allows for a complex relationship between the post-socialist present and the socialist past to emerge. I study the texts and their reception, in conjunction with an analysis of the dominant ways of remembering the socialist past circulating within German and Russian society and culture. This allows the analysis to go beyond a straightforward comparison between the representations of the socialist past in the two groups of texts, to also explore how those representations are interpreted and received. It also demonstrates how the surrounding memory cultures appear to be producing quite different approaches to representing memories of broadly similar socialist childhood experiences.

Chapter 1 explores the role of literary texts in revealing and shaping both individual and collective memory with a review of relevant research in the field of memory studies. Chapter 2 draws on existing scholarship on post-socialist memory in German and Russian society and culture in order to identify dominant trends in the way the socialist past has been remembered and represented in the two countries since 1990/1. The analysis in Chapters 3 and 4 reveals a more detailed picture of the complexities and ambiguities inherent in looking back at childhood under socialist rule through the example of the chosen texts, and in the ways they are received by critics and by readers (in reviews posted online). I demonstrate that, in line with the surrounding memory cultures, questions of how the socialist past should be remembered are a more central concern in the German texts and their reception than in the Russian texts and reception. I show, however, that the nature of the Soviet past is often portrayed indirectly in the Russian texts and I explore how critics and readers respond to these portrayals.

Note on Transliteration and Translation:
The Library of Congress system without diacritics is used for the transliteration of Cyrillic. Unless otherwise stated, translations are my own and references are made to the original source. Quotations from the primary texts in the original language can be found in the Appendix. Quotations from secondary material are given in translation only.
Acknowledgements

I am very grateful to all those who have supported me in the writing of this thesis. Particular thanks go to my supervisor, Dr Katharine Hodgson, for her guidance and encouragement, and for always finding time to discuss my work. Thank you also to Dr Chloe Paver for her valuable advice and feedback. I am grateful to the University of Exeter for providing funding for my second and third years of study, without which it would have been a struggle to continue. Thanks must also go to all my friends and family for showing an interest in my work and for being understanding of the demands of writing a thesis. I particularly want to thank Oxane Leingang for her advice and support. I am especially grateful to my parents for their unconditional emotional and financial support. Finally, thank you to Ian, for taking care of everything else in our lives so I could concentrate on this.
Contents

Abstract 3
Acknowledgements 4

Introduction 9
Aims and Approach of the Thesis 10
Why Childhood? 12
The Primary Texts 14
Existing Scholarship and the Contribution Made by this Thesis 23

Chapter 1: Memory, Literature and Childhood: Theoretical Considerations 31
Theories of Collective and Cultural Memory 32
Literature and Memory 39
Childhood, Memory and Literature 46
Conclusion 56

Chapter 2: German and Russian Memory Cultures 59
Remembering the Socialist Past 60
Remembering the East German Past 71
Transitional Justice 74
State-sponsored Memory, History and Public Debate 78
Eastern German Identity after the Fall of the Wall 82
Ostalgie 89
The German Literary Context after the Fall of the Wall 95
Post-Unification Literary Representation of the GDR and East German Experience 99
Conclusion 109

Remembering the Soviet Past 110
Glasnost 111
Transitional Justice and the Political Use of Memory 114
Nostalgia and Selective Forgetting 120
The Post-Soviet Russian Literary Context 134
Representations of the Soviet Past in Post-Soviet Russian Literature 137
Memoirs and Fictional Narratives of Everyday Soviet Experience 141
Conclusion 149
Chapter 3: Memory of Life under Socialism in German, Russian and Russian Émigré Narratives of Childhood 151

Analysis of German Texts by Mourad Kusserow, Kathrin Aehnlich, Claudia Rusch and Daniel Wiechmann 159

Rüber machen: Eine Kindheit und Jugend in der Sowjetischen Besatzungszone/DDR 159
Wenn ich groß bin, flieg ich zu den Sternen 165
Meine freie deutsche Jugend 174
Immer Bereit! Von einem jungen Pionier der auszog, das Glück zu suchen 181

Analysis of Russian Texts by Larisa Miller, Boris Minaev, Oleg Zaionchkovskii, Pavel Sanaev and Oleg Pavlov 190
‘Bol’shaia Polianka’ 190
Detstvo Levy 198
Petrovich 208
Pokhoronite menia za plintusom 216
‘V bezbozhnykh pereulkakh’ and ‘Shkol’niki’ 221

Analysis of Russian Émigré Texts by Ruben David Gonsales Gal’ego and Elena Gorokhova 229
Beloe na chernom 229
A Mountain of Crumbs 236
Conclusion 244

Chapter 4: Reception by Critics and Readers 248

German Reception 252

Critics’ Reception of the German Texts 253
Wenn ich groß bin, flieg ich zu den Sternen 253
Zonenkinder 258
Meine freie deutsche Jugend 264
Halbschwimmer 271
Waning Interest in Narratives of East German Childhood 274
Immer Bereit 277
Rüber machen... 279

Readers’ Reception of the German Texts 280
Identification, Memory and Authenticity 281
Readers’ Assessments of the Representation of the GDR 287
Conclusion 296
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Section</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Russian Reception</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Critics' Reception of the Russian Texts</td>
<td>297</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>‘Bol’shaia Polianka’ in Zolotaia Simfonii</td>
<td>300</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Petrovich</td>
<td>306</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Pokhoronite menia za plintusom</td>
<td>315</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Beloe na chernom</td>
<td>324</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Readers’ Reception of the Russian Texts</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Detstvo Levy</td>
<td>337</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Pokhoronite menia za plintusom</td>
<td>339</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Beloe na chernom</td>
<td>349</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Conclusion</td>
<td>353</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Conclusion</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Appendix: Quotations from the Primary Texts in the Original Language</td>
<td>362</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bibliography</td>
<td>382</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>