QUEER BODIES AND SETTLEMENTS:

The pertinence of queer theory in the fields of queer history and trans politics, disability and 'curative education', quantum physics and experimental art – an interdisciplinary and transnational account of three socio-cultural and filmic research projects

ABSTRACT

What is queer? What is queer? What is queer theory? Where can it go from here? This thesis sets out to explore the origins and influences of queer theory before investigating the present and the future spaces (ie, bodies and settlements) it can potentially move into. Three distinct experiments of fieldwork and ethnographic filmmaking test the truths and potentialities of queer theory when relating to queer bodies and settlements. That is to say that each chapter balances a film and its supporting text by embracing the value and urgency of practice led research.

The first chapter questions queer history and details the importance of emerging trans politics in the post-gender, leftist, avant-garde, queer activist and militant space of Bologna. Queer bodies, case one: transgender and transsexual perspectives. Settlements, case one: Bologna and Lido di Classe (Italy).

The second chapter considers the interface between disability theory and queer theory with particular attention paid to the practical theory of 'curative education'. Defined by Rudolf Steiner in 1922 and further developed by Karl König with the foundation of the Camphill movement in 1944, curative education privileges the social model over the medical model in the field of disability so that disability is in fact ability. Queer bodies, case two: learning differences and disabilities perspectives. Settlements, case two: Berlin (Germany), Chatou and La Rochelle (France), Barry and Glasallt Fawr (Wales, United Kingdom).

The third chapter uses queer perspectives to promote the relevance of quantum physics to the human body, thus involving contemporary dance, physical theatre and the arts more generally to address and redress the chiasm between science and technology on the one hand, and arts, humanities and socio-cultural sciences on the other. Queer bodies, case three: the inescapably queer reality of the physical world. Settlements, case three: multiple locations in Tuscany (Italy), and Thamesmead, London (England, United Kingdom).

This thesis brings notions of queer and otherness deceptively close to notions of the self. Otherness and queerness become mirrors in which our own queerness comes into view.

Acknowledgments

First and foremost I wish to thank my supervisor, Professor Susan Hayward, for your patience, guidance, encouragement, scope and inspiration without which I could never have found my way to the end of this thesis. You made me hang on to my passion and intuition and follow them through, allowing me to keep a broad spectrum of investigation until it naturally came to the point. Your understanding means the world.

Many thanks from the bottom of my heart to my parents, Terry and Philippe Garel, for your constant support, good humour and unconditional love. To my brother, Guillaume Garel, for being the funniest, soundest and brightest geezer I know. My deepest appreciation for enduring love goes to my soulmate and sister, Julie Foulon. You opened my eyes in the most celebratory fashion. You are an icon, a queen and a beautiful source of creativity and enthusiasm. I also wish to thank Mery Zourabichvili for reaching inside of us and making it our strength, for constantly stretching my mind and getting me, for always pushing the ongoing art piece that is our lives and friendship. Without you I am nothing.

My renewed gratitude to all the participants and collaborators I have had the privilege and the honour to work with, you know who you are. If not, check the film credits. A special extra mention to Giulio Maria Piantadosi (the time is coming soon), Marcus Albrecht (your generosity is unmatched), Hannah Curtis (for all the good times) and Francesca Duranti (I am in awe of you).

All my gratitude to the United Kingdom for being the right place for me these last nine years. To all the queerlings who have challenged my preconceptions, to all the queerlings who have moved me, to all the queerlings who have shown me a different way. To Jill Hurst – what can I say? It's still our party and we're still on our way to something amazing, somewhere. To the three men whom I fell so desperately in love with once upon a time, for showing me – however unintentionally – that it can happen. To my Exeter family, especially Liz hom (sister queerling), Tam-tam (you!), wuj Tomek (my best straight man), Gigi (the revelation of 2007), Pirate Luke (the lesbian hetero) and Lisa La Frange (the revelation of 2008). You make everyday feel like a hom'agay.

More thankfulness goes to Carlota Bérard for giving me such important recommendations in the last few weeks. To Professor Bill Watson (William Charles) for getting me hooked on Anthropology from the start. To Doctor Saër Maty Bâ for your time, your drive and your perspective.

This thesis could not be dedicated to anyone in particular, it is to all of you who are real, who mean it, who resist, who stand up to be counted but challenge the authority of the person counting.

To what makes it all worth while.
