A sends information to B.

Transitive triad such that A sends information to B and C, and B also sends information to C. The smallest example of a ‘chamber.’

A and B agree so A’s information echoes B’s understanding.

A transitive triad where each actor already holds the same position – an echo chamber.